It covers the full range of closing steps, and shows how to fine-tune the closing process to achieve a shorter close. # Preface

One of the most difficult tasks for the practicing accountant is to close the books at the end of each month and produce a quality set of financial statements in a timely manner. From the perspective of the rest of the company, it may be considered the most important accounting function of all. Closing the Books: An Accountant's Guide walks you through every aspect of closing the books, including specific closing activities, how to construct the financial statement package, and how to fine-tune the process.

In Chapters 1-3, we address the system within which the closing process is accomplished, including the general ledger and subsidiary ledgers, the trial balance, and different types of journal entries. In Chapters 4 and 5, we delve into the specific steps needed to close the books, as well as how to accelerate the production of financial statements. Next, in Chapters 6-11, we cover the closing activities associated with specific accounting areas, including cash, accounts receivable, inventory, fixed assets, and accounts payable. In Chapter 12-19, we address all aspects of the financial statements that are the end result of closing the books – the income statement, balance sheet, statement of cash flows, disclosures, earnings per share, interim reporting, and more. Finally, we complete the discussion of closing the books in Chapters 20-23 by covering how to close the books of a public company, implement closing controls, set up a record keeping system, and use a soft close or virtual close.

The reader can find the answers to many questions about closing the books in the following chapters, including:

- Can I create financial statements from an extended trial balance?
- When should I use reversing entries?
- Which closing steps can be completed before month-end?
- How can task interdependency analysis improve the closing process?
- Should I use more automation to close the books?
- How do I handle negative cash on the balance sheet?
- How should I record deferred revenue?
- How do I handle delays in the approval of supplier invoices?
- When should I accrue for bonuses?
- What financial statement formats should I use?

Closing the Books is designed for both professional accountants and students. Professionals can use it as a reference tool for improving their existing closing procedures, while it provides students with an overview of the entire process. Given its complete coverage of the closing topic, Closing the Books may earn a permanent place on your book shelf.
